Going Global at Juniata

Juniata College
Huntingdon, Pennsylvania 16652

Office of the President

Friends:

A year ago, with the summer issue of the COLLEGE BULLETIN, we began a series of articles featuring academic departments which form the heart of the College. You've read about the business department and Peace and Conflict Studies, which were highlighted in this magazine last year. Now, in this issue, I invite you to examine another area to which Juniata is committed—International Studies.

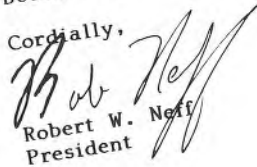

Because we live in a steadily shrinking world, every issue of significance becomes a global issue. Liberal learning at its best should equip our students to deal responsibly with the larger world. For this reason, coursework in international studies is a required part of the College's core curriculum.

As a program of emphasis, international studies is interdisciplinary in nature; students take courses in a number of academic areas. While history, political science, economics, foreign languages and literature often constitute a large portion of the program, there are many other areas within the College which relate to this concentration.

Students are encouraged to, and often do, use international studies offerings to supplement other areas of concentration. It not only allows students to become familiar with another society through their work at Juniata but may also involve study abroad, which allows students to live in a different political, social, and cultural environment.

Juniata will continue its dedication to international studies. Since the world has become a global village in which different people and cultures are interacting ever more frequently on a daily basis, it is vital that Juniata produce graduates who can function in an international context. I believe you will find that commitment clearly portrayed in the articles in this COLLEGE BULLETIN.

Cordially,

Robert W. Neff

International Education

PROVIDING GLOBAL VISION OF OUR CHANGING WORLD

There are miles and miles of land and water between the nations of the world, but despite the difference in our language, our appearance, our culture and our families, we're very similar in our needs, fears, hopes and dreams. Within the liberal arts tradition at Juniata College, students are expected to develop as responsible young adults, as well as knowledgeable and sensitive members of the global community. Students not only discover their needs, fears and dreams during their college experience, but they are encouraged to compare their world views with those of other cultures and societies, to analyze their value systems, and to challenge parochialism and prejudice.

International education at Juniata has developed over the past 20 years from a marginal activity to one of the most important thrusts of the institution. According to Dr. William C. Vocke, associate dean of academic affairs and director of international programs, students study abroad; cross-cultural programming has increased; the number of international students on campus has grown substantially; and students with international studies as a Program of Emphasis (POE) now are a significant part of the humanities and social science disciplines; while many other students incorporate international studies into their POE.

All students are required to take one or more courses in international studies at Juniata. "International studies is a part of every student's education and it has become evident in the campus-wide environment. We continue to increase the number of students who study abroad and participate in exchange programs. Faculty members are incorporating international studies into all types of course-work and the co-curricular programming has expanded as well," Dr. Vocke said.

These developments have occurred incrementally, keeping the particular character and mission of Juniata in mind.

According to Dr. Vocke the program has four dimensions. They are:

- 1) international exchanges and study abroad options;
- 2) a comprehensive program for majors and minors;
- 3) a college wide emphasis on international issues in both distribution and core requirements;
- 4) co-curricular activities and an orientation program.

Juniata's off campus program began over twenty years ago with the formation of Brethren Colleges Abroad (BCA) by six church-related institutions. Programs that work in cooperation with local universities have been developed by BCA in Germany, Spain, France, England, Japan, and China. "Like most early study abroad programs, these initially focused on language, culture, history, and politics. They have subsequently become broader and emphasize bringing students into intimate contact with the local environment through as much academic and social immersion as possible," said Dr. Vocke.

According to Dr. Vocke, these initial programs met many needs, but faculty in the natural sciences, particularly Dr. William Russey, noticed that too few science students were able to participate because of the difficulty of finding and receiving credit for science courses abroad. He, Dr. Ruth Reed, and others developed the concept of one-for-one exchange in response to this need. Dr. Vocke said, "If Juniata received and nurtured French or German science students, faculty in the corresponding universities would respond to our students in the same manner. A student could continue development in scientific techniques while experiencing the culture and extending linguistics skills."

The exchange program, and study abroad have been supplemented with an internship program and the establishment of a relationship with the University of Leeds in England. Exchanges have the added institutional advantages of bringing quality international students to enrich the campus and keeping institutional funds at home. Seven exchange relationships exist in England, France, Germany, Mexico and Japan.

"These off campus programs are perhaps the best developed component of our international education package," said Vocke. Recent graduate, Jeff Buehler '89 studied in Germany during his junior year. He said, "my experience was quite good, I worked a lot on academics and lived like a German student for the year. I loved Germany. I learned a lot in not only an academic sense, but a practical sense as well. I experienced the culture directly. Instead of just reading about it, I lived it!" Mr. Buehler said the highlight of his experience was working for WDR-1, the largest public radio station in West Germany. The week before he left Germany, he went on the air, speaking German to the Germans. His POE is a combination of International Relations and Peace and Conflict Studies. In the fall he will study international development policy at Rutgers, followed by two years of service with the Peace Corps.

According to Dr. Vocke the overseas program rests on several basic principles. First, students are expected to concentrate in their majors when they study overseas and grades are translated into American equivalents as part of the cumulative average. Second, the programs should be fully integrated into the local culture and educational system. Most students go for a full year so that they may adequately appreciate the culture. They are accepted into the program on a full-time basis and are treated as regular members of the student body.

Next, study in a foreign language environment is encouraged for all students. On campus Juniata offers Chinese, French, German, Japanese, Russian and Spanish. Each of these is designed to provide students with functional proficiency in the target language and to acquaint them with foreign people, its culture, history, literature and institution. The study abroad programs in Spain, France, and Germany are linguistic immersion programs, while the Japanese and Chinese programs have some English instruction to go along with the instruction in the target language.

Juniata has five full-time faculty members and four visiting instructors teaching foreign language and a magnificent foreign language lab on campus. Approximately 430 students are enrolled in a foreign language course each year.

Juniata student Kim Glaude works on a project for her art class at the Kansai Gaidi University in Japan.

Finally, the key to making this program available to all students is the belief that no additional financial burden should be placed on the students. If students participate in a Juniata program, all financial aid applies, and need is recalculated to match the expected increase in expenses. Students should be able to get to their place of study and enjoy some of the cultural opportunities available. Hence, round trip air fare is provided along with either a month train pass or an organized set of local excursions.

The second dimension of international education at Juniata is the program of international studies as a major or minor (POE). "Juniata's unique curriculum allows students flexibility in constructing their Programs of Emphasis and encourages individual distinctiveness. Thus, constructing 'majors and minors' in international affairs has been relatively easy. The interdisciplinary character of internationally oriented majors is readily accommodated. This ability to 'mix and match' within a rigorous academic program is one of the reasons international studies at Juniata continues to show dramatic growth and vigor," Dr. Vocke stated.

"Many students major in very traditional disciplines, but add an international component to their POE as a secondary emphasis. For example, they may want to study business, but they want to have the capacity to operate in an increasingly competitive international business environment," added Dr. Vocke.

Students wanting to "major" in international studies will take courses in foreign languages, history and politics. These students should be cognizant of another culture and language, as well as its historical, political and economic backgrounds, according to Dr. Vocke.

Regardless of a student's POE, he or she is required to take at least one distribution requirement in "International Studies." "This third dimension of international education is designed to introduce an awareness of foreign values and points of view into the intellectual habits of all of our students," Dr. Vocke explained. The implementation of this requirement is a key step in internationalizing Juniata.

The co-curricular emphasis on international studies has added to the internationalization of the campus. According to Dr. Vocke, the increase in the number of international students on campus and the increase in Juniata students going abroad has required the development of the fourth dimension of international studies, an extensive co-curricular and orientation program. This program makes the educational and cultural transition easier for students and many activities with an international flare have been integrated into campus life.

During the last school year numerous speakers came to Juniata and addressed international issues. Among the speakers and topics were: Dr. Joseph O'Grady, "America Faces Russia: A Longer View;" Dr. Craig Baxter, "The United States and Pakistan after Zia;" Dr. Laurence Birns, "Current Developments in the Caribbean Basin;" Dr. Robert Legvold, "Gorbachev: New Opportunity or Old Rhetoric;" Shulin Ding, "China's Cultural Heritage;" Jerry and Lucille Levin, "American Options in the Mid-East;" Dr. Rio Preisner, "Inward Emigration in Germany During the Third Reich;" Hans-Jochen Brauns, "Social Policy in Europe;" and Dr. Gyula Zeller, "Economic Crisis and Political Tension in Eastern Europe."

In addition to the lecture series, the group Los Muchachos performed "The Flight of the Quetzal;" the Mexican group Amigo presented a number of contemporary songs in their native tongue; and the masterpiece cinema included several foreign films. During International Week and Foreign Language Week on campus, nightly programs were scheduled and meals in the dining hall had a cross cultural flavor.

"A few years ago an international club was organized on campus. This group has been responsible for planning international week, and presenting several international events and field trips. Juniata also has a Sigma Iota Rho chapter, an honorary international relations society. What we see from the combination of all of these things is that international studies is an underlying piece of all things at Juniata," explained Dr. Vocke.

Dr. Vocke noted, "It's hard to know what impact any one course has on a student during their four years at Juniata, because you see that growth in the context of their other classes and co-curricular programming, and in the context of them growing older and maturing. But in terms of study abroad, I see them as sophomores and I see them as seniors and the change is remarkable."

In addition, the foreign students who study at Juniata for a year have a fulfilling experience. "One of our faculty members recently attended the fourth annual international alumni event in Luxemborg, and he wrote back to us and said he was amazed at the level of commitment and enthusiasm for Juniata and he was genuinely warmed by the display of love these people have for the College. Most of those people only spent a year here," noted Dr. Vocke.

Pierre Verroye came to Juniata in 1982 from IESEG at la'Catho University in Lille, France. He will be the first to tell you that his experience at Juniata helped to determine his future. His wife, Maria Dolson Verroye '86 agrees that her year in England enabled her to map out her future. She said, "When Pierre came to Juniata I was a freshman. We became good friends and kept in touch even after he went home. In 1984 I went to Cheltenham in England to study elementary education. I visited him in France at Christmas and he came to see me in England. We were married in France and returned to Juniata for my senior year." The couple now lives in Virginia where Pierre is a programmer/analyst for Operation Research Inc. and Maria tends to the needs of their 15-month-old daughter Natasha.

"The year in Cheltenham was culturally enriching for me. The academic program was rigorous and fulfilling. I still correspond with my teaching partner and my foreign family," said Maria. Her husband echoes similar feelings about Juniata, "Juniata changed my life, not only did I improve my English, but I learned a lot about computers and business. Meeting Maria had a tremendous impact on my life and future. It would not have been possible if I had not come to Juniata," he said.

Maria added, "When people ask me how we met, I tell them about Juniata, a liberal arts college located in central Pennsylvania, offering an excellent opportunity to become truly concerned with life outside the United States."

As Dr. Neff states in his letter to the alumni and friends, "Because we live in a steadily shrinking world, almost every issue of significance becomes a global issue." Juniata has accepted this proposition and continues the process of internationalizing its college campus.

European Study Offerings Extended To Incoming Freshmen

Juniata's international educational opportunities took a major step forward this year with the first Brumbaugh-Ellis Scholars Abroad Seminar. Seventeen exceptional, prospective students left the campus on June 26 for an extended educational tour of Europe as part of the course entitled "Comparative Cultures."

The four week tour, supervised by Juniata faculty and staff members, makes use of geographic and cultural locations to provide an educational and culturally enriching experience. The students earn college credit while on the tour, with the total cost of the trip deducted from the students' first year tuition bills at the college.

Students are selected for the trip based on the results of the Brumbaugh-Ellis scholarship exam given annually to applicants who score 1100 or higher on the SAT and rank in the top 20% of their graduating class.

Accompanying the students to Europe this year were Juniata faculty and staff members Dr. Karen Rosell, professor of art history, Dr. William Vocke, director of international programs, and C. Scott Neff, admissions counselor.

The program, which this year ran from June 24 to July 24, provided the students with the opportunity to visit England, Holland, Belgium, and France. The students also visited many of the world's foremost art museums, parliamentary/government buildings, and landmarks in London, Salisbury, York, Amsterdam, DenHague, Bruges, Brussels, Lille, and Paris.

a group of nations. The course surveys two specific topics each summer. This summer the topics are Post-World War II European Politics and The Emergence of Contemporary Western Art.

Students attended lectures and discussions with instructors and local experts; visited museums, theatres, and government offices; and conducted interviews with local residents. Students were graded based on exams, the results of journals kept by each student, active participation throughout the trip, and a final paper.

Juniata College Hosts International Symposium

The second annual conference of the Central Pennsylvania Collaborative for International Education was held at Juniata College this spring.

The conference, entitled "Opening Our Windows On The World" was attended by elementary teachers, secondary teachers, administrators, college/university faculty and high school students covering 11 counties in Central Pennsylvania.

The purpose of the conference was to help teachers and high schools prepare for the international challenge of the next decade. "The world is becoming increasingly interdependent, and for America to survive and prosper, our American education must reflect an international dimension," said Dr. William C. Vocke, director of international programs at Juniata College. "We have to live in a world of strong economic competition and diverse cultures, it is imperative that we learn to deal successfully and humanely with them," he added.

More than 120 people participated in the conference that addressed diverse views of international resource issues, economic issues, political issues, cultural issues and communication issues.

The collaborative was formed to encourage the development of an international dimension among students, teachers and community leaders of central Pennsylvania. It has been seeking ways to form a network of teachers interested in international studies. "Recognizing the increasing pressures placed on schools, businesses and communities by the world beyond the Commonwealth, the Central Pennsylvania Collaborative for International Education wants to be ready to meet the challenges and opportunities that will come with the 21st century. An understanding of other people, languages, cultures and systems will be crucial for America's prosperity," Dr. Vocke said.

JUNIATA EXCHANGE PROGRAMS

One of the most visible efforts toward the internationalization of the Juniata curriculum is the student exchange program. Since 1976 Juniata College has had formal student exchange agreements with a number of college and university level institutions abroad.

The program presently includes exchanges in France, Germany, England, Mexico, and Japan. These programs involve a year of undergraduate study abroad, concentration in the student's major field of interest, enrollment in courses comparable but not identical to those available at Juniata, "switching" places with a foreign partner, being treated like a student of the host country, and, finally, expenses similar to a year at Juniata.

According to Dr. William Vocke, director of international programs and associate dean of academic affairs, Juniata believes that all students should be exposed to the larger world of which they are a part. "An understanding of international interdependence is best achieved if students are able to experience another culture from the inside," Dr. Vocke said.

"The junior year is an ideal time for American students to spend a year abroad, since it is usually preceded by a sound introduction to the "major" and followed by a year in which all remaining graduation requirements or career preparations can be completed. Learning about the world from within a different culture provides a unique opportunity for deeper and broader personal growth," he said.

While any international experience is valuable and is encouraged, Juniata believes that educational programs abroad best promote this internationalization when they are associated with the academic area and the career goals of the student.

The Exchange Program allows students to continue their academic work in their discipline while studying abroad. Students usually take as much academic work in their area as they would at Juniata. The specific courses are not always matched, but this is not a year spent outside of the discipline. In fact, the different perspective on the discipline often provides insight and balance not normally achievable within a purely American context.

Students are accepted into the program of the host institution on a full-time basis and are treated as regular members of the student body. They attend classes, write papers, take exams, etc., side-by-side with their counterparts abroad.

In order to fully understand the culture, language, and the discipline from a non-American perspective, students become part of the society. There is ample supervision but no American director stands over the student. According to Dr. Vocke, "We attempt to interfere as little as possible with the student's immersion, while providing adequate support of course."

That support comes in three forms. First, there is an orientation period at Juniata prior to departure. In addition, a Juniata faculty member will visit all the exchange students in the Fall to review their plans, and all students are welcome to call collect to discuss problems. Second, a specific advisor at the host institution is designated for each student. Finally, and perhaps most importantly, a support group exists at each institution consisting of people who have been to Juniata or are especially interested in the program. These groups are a "safety net" and an invaluable source of information about the different educational and cultural systems.

Similarly, the exchanges serve as a means of bringing a surprisingly large number of foreign students to Huntingdon, expanding the opportunities of students still on the Juniata campus and members of the Huntingdon community as well.

In putting their specific program together students are provided with guidelines to select a set of courses which are equivalent up to 34 Juniata credits. Credits for successfully completed work are assigned on a course-by-course basis upon the participant's return. Grades earned abroad are converted to their Juniata equivalents. They appear on all transcripts and are counted in the GPA, just as if they had been earned at Juniata.

On the average, students do as well abroad as at Juniata, according to Dr. Vocke, and, with this transfer of grades, the students can present a full transcript to employers, graduate schools, medical schools, and other professional programs.

One very important aspect of the exchange program is the possibility that each participant, American and foreign, will develop a relationship with the family of his or her exchange partner. All participants are urged to arrange for their partner to spend the first week in-country at their family's home (or, if necessary, the home of friends) as a means of helping the visitor become accustomed to the new environment and the challenge of coping with everyday problems in a strange language. Most participants over the years have cited this family experience as a major advantage of the exchange program.

The Federation Universitaire and Polytechnique de Lille Hautes Etudes Industrielle is one of the universities in France where Juniata students study each year.

Students are chosen for the program based upon the recommendation of their major department with due consideration given to adequate language ability, when appropriate. Normally, an applicant has a cumulative grade point average of no less than 2.50 and is making normal progress toward a Juniata degree.

Experience has shown that Juniata participants with adequate language training at the college are able to perform very well in course work in their specialty. "Total immersion in the foreign language from the outset is generally a very effective way to polish language skills," said Dr. Vocke. "As much language work at the college as possible is strongly encouraged," he added, "since it will contribute greatly to the overall cultural and academic experience." Special language courses can also be made available in Europe before classes start.

Partnerships have also been established between academic departments at Juniata and the foreign affiliates so that the faculty can become acquainted with the offerings abroad. "Faculty involvement is important for the recruitment and orientation of participants and for advising the foreign students," Dr. Vocke noted. "In fact," he said, "a number of faculty exchanges have been arranged and more are planned."

Student Prepares for International Future

Geoffrey Miller '89 of Brunswick, Maine, received his Juniata diploma in May and then headed south. True, many students take a vacation after graduation before going back to school or entering the work force. However, Miller's trip south of the border is not all fun in the sun.

Miller, who completed a program of emphasis at Juniata combining International Studies and Spanish, decided to mix business with pleasure by taking a summer internship at The Institute of International Education in Mexico City. It was a perfect follow-up to an internship he completed last fall at The Washington (D.C.) Office on Latin America.

"This internship in Mexico City compliments my Washington experience very well. In both situations I got to use my Spanish often," Miller said during a recent phone interview.

"The internship with the Washington Office on Latin America was well-rounded and included typical internship type duties. In general, our function was to let people know what was going on in the Latin American region," Miller explained.

"Here in Mexico City, I'm directly helping out more and experiencing the region on a more personal level," Miller continued. "The apartment I lived in when I first arrived was in a real working class neighborhood, so I got to experience a Mexican lifestyle most Americans never see."

Miller is considering graduate studies dealing with Latin American issues. It was because of this interest that he approached William Vocke, director of international programs at Juniata, about the possibility of another internship experience. Vocke made some connections and off Miller went to Mexico.

The Institute of International Education in Mexico City is run by the U.S. Government under the direction of the U.S. Embassy. The office is located above a U.S. Embassy library and is staffed by U.S. Foreign Service workers. All speak both English and Spanish fluently, according to Miller.

"We basically help people get the information they need about educational opportunities for them in the United States and elsewhere," Miller said. "I often explain about a typical day at college, how they'll choose classes and what life is like in America. I also help people obtain student visas."

While he aids others in understanding life and education in a foreign country, Miller continues to learn about the cultures of Latin America. According to Miller his work schedule is "perfect" since it is adjusted to a four-day week, allowing him long weekends to travel the country and region during the two-month internship.

His travels may take him into another internship situation later this summer. He is considering working in Costa Rica after his stay in Mexico City is completed.

"I'm very fortunate to have had a good chance to really see what it's like in Latin America," Miller said. "These international experiences will help me make better decisions about my educational and career choices in the future."

JC FACULTY TRAVEL THE WORLD

Dr. Kim Richardson, associate professor of education, is pictured here travelling across Inner Mongolia by camel. She supervised the BCA program in China this fall.

Juniata College faculty members recognize that learning and development is a lifelong process. One important way in which our faculty members continue to grow and enrich their lives is taking place through international study and travel.

Juniata believes that a personal experience with a non-American language or culture provides the best combination of personal enrichment and international education expertise. The expertise that faculty members gain through travel abroad is shared with students in the classroom when they return.

There are several ways in which faculty members engage in worldwide travel. Many faculty members have been granted funds for travel, research, course development and conferences through Juniata's faculty development program supported by a $300,000 award from the PEW Charitable Trusts. Faculty also volunteer as academic representatives to the BCA program, still others take personal time in the summer or a leave of absence during the school year to become internationally enriched. According to Kevin McCullen, director of development, the PEW grant provides $75,000 each year for faculty and curriculum development opportunities. "This grant extends through 1991 by which time Juniata will have endowed the program through fund raising efforts," McCullen said.

Dr. Robert Fisher, professor of biology, took advantage of a Pew Grant in 1988, teaching a one week module entitled, "The Biomes of North America," in Lille, France at the Institute of Superior Agriculture. In addition to teaching, Dr. Fisher observed courses in Amsterdam and Marburg. "When you have the opportunity to visit another culture, you learn more about your own culture and undoubtedly become more knowledgeable," he said.

A PEW Grant funded a trip for history professor Klaus Kipphan. In Dr. Kipphan's report on his journey through the Indian subcontinent he said, "Aside from two weeks trekking through the Tibetan inhabited northern border regions of Nepal (Himalayas), I spent an entire three months in pursuit of the 'discovery' of Hindu India, its values and its problems. My journey began in the westernized city of Bombay, continued through Cochin, the spice capital of the world; the temple city of Madurai; Madras, the political and cultural city of the Dravidian Tamils; Bhubaneswar, the capital of Orissa and site of the 500 surviving temples from India's Middle Ages; Calcutta, India's biggest city and intellectual metropolis; Varnasi, the oldest living city on earth and focus on the Hindu pilgrimage and salvation hopes; Kathmandu, the fabulous capital of the only surviving Hindu monarchy; Delhi; Jaisalmer, in the Great Indian Desert and ended, after a rest stop in "Catholic" Goa, once again, in Bombay on the Arabian Sea. From the Arabian Sea to the Bay of Bengal, from the land of the gentle and hospitable Tamils in the deep south to the peaks of the Himalayas in the North did I traverse 'Mother India' in search of living characteristics of Indian culture."

Dr. Kipphan added, "Most moving about India were its generous, loving people, the display of affection to this strange looking white man who didn't stop asking questions. Simple people felt honored because I took them seriously and showed interest in their lives. Educated people respected me because I dared to leave the trodden path of Western tourists behind and tried to know the country as few of them did. Children collected berries for me and strangers invited me for dinner, or at least a glass of water, tea or coffee. Students competed in showing me their native village and held my hand in a display of sympathy (typically an Indian expression of friendship). Faculty shared their professional concerns with me and begged to stay in touch."

Dr. Kipphan concluded his report by saying, "I realize that there is more to know. But I believe that I have developed a better comprehension of Indian Hindu culture. This will help me to create together with my colleagues at Juniata a viable GE 200 course on Hindu Culture. By exploring with our students chief features of Hindu tradition and values, we may succeed in beginning a fruitful dialogue with ourselves and our own Western experience and values."

During the 1988-89 year several faculty members were awarded grant money for foreign travel. Evelyn Church, assistant professor of Spanish, studied Mexican culture and archaeology. Jim Donaldson, professor of economics and business administration, recently returned from Europe where he visited schools in the exchange program with Juniata. While visiting those schools, he investigated the development of an international business program for Juniata. Bob Reilly, professor of sociology, is currently on a faculty exchange at the Fachhochschule Muenster and the University of Muenster. Klaus Kipphan returned overseas to do a photographic documentation of the historical sites in Paris that are connected with the French Revolution. Deborah Kirchoff-Glazier, associate professor of biology and Doug Glazier, associate professor of biology, are visiting exchange universities in Marburg and Lille and working on projects in England. Ruth Reed, professor of chemistry, planned a study trip to India, while Bob Wagoner, professor of philosophy, learned more about medieval Russia and Jack Troy, assistant professor of art, visited museums and schools of ceramic artists in the Soviet Union. Karen Rosell, assistant professor of art, recently completed her second trip to Europe for academic planning and curriculum development in the art department. She is currently serving as a faculty representative on Juniata's unique Scholar's Abroad trip (see separate story).

All of these trips, plus Professor Alexander McBride's trip to China (see separate story) were supported in part by the PEW grant. Many other faculty members have travelled this year in faculty exchange programs and still others for personal enjoyment and international enrichment.

In addition to these opportunities, members of the faculty have represented Juniata as BCA program directors. Dr. Kim Richardson, associate professor of education, taught at the Dalian Institute of Foreign Language in Dalian, the second largest port city in China, this fall while directing the BCA program.

Dr. Richardson taught a number of courses to the Chinese students that she taught to her students at Juniata. "When you teach a course to people who don't use English as their primary language you learn to present the material in a clearer, concise and precise manner," she said. "I think this will make me a better teacher. You need to evaluate your courses and present the most important information because the students aren't able to grasp every detail in English." Dr. Richardson had the task of arranging all of the tours for the BCA students noting that the trip to inner Mongolia was quite interesting. "When you travel to other countries, you find a new culture, history, language and way of life. My husband and I lived in a two room apartment where you had hot water once in a while. It was a personal challenge to give up the luxuries in life and live in a more primitive manner. It was gratifying to know that we can do it," she said.

Dr. Richardson related a story that emphasizes cultural differences only to be discovered during a year abroad for faculty and students. "The residence halls are very different for international students, she said, "compared to the halls for the Chinese students. It's surprising that the Chinese students didn't rebel sooner. Our students lived two to a room, had electricity 24 hours a day, and showers in the halls. Chinese students at the same university lived eight to a room, had the electricity shut off at 10:30 pm and had to pay to take a shower," she noted.

An opportunity to teach in another country, do research, interact with foreign college students and faculty members can only enhance one's ability to educate others. Learning is a lifelong process for everyone and foreign travel serves as a way to educate, enrich and refresh Juniata faculty members.

Professor Alexander McBride was warmly welcomed to the Dalian Institute of Foreign Languages in China.

REPORT ON CONTEMPORARY DEVELOPMENTS IN CHINESE ART

by Alexander T. McBride, professor of art, chairman, art department, Juniata College

Editor's Note: Professor McBride prepared this report following his trip to China during the Fall semester. The postscript addresses the recent situation in China.

My purpose in coming to China was to gain an understanding of Chinese art and to develop a course in that subject for Juniata College. To accomplish this, one of the projects in which I have engaged is to provide free lectures at art academies in exchange for an opportunity to meet and talk with art faculty and students.

The topic of my lectures was the evolution of the modern styles in Western Art. Beginning with the ideas of Realism in the early part of the 19th Century, I traced how each movement, Impressionism, Cubism, etc., led to total abstraction and the expression of an insecure age. At every academy, each of my lectures was well attended. Students filled the lecture halls to standing room only. At Luoyang University, the first time I gave the lecture with an interpreter, the lecture lasted four hours and the students not only remained attentive but spent 45 minutes afterwards asking questions. My painting demonstrations were equally well attended with the same enthusiasm for questions and answers.

Each school provided me with an opportunity to meet with faculty and students and I used those opportunities to try to find out what the primary ideas are underlying contemporary Chinese art. After having met with these people plus some of Dalian's local artists, I would conclude that the future of Chinese art is still in a state of transition.

As a trained painter (BFA Rhode Island School of Design, MFA Cornell University) I have not seen much contemporary Chinese painting or sculpture that impresses me. Two problems that contribute to this state of affairs is the system of patronage which relies on pleasing party officials, and the desire to cater to the tastes of foreign tourists. In the one case, painters and sculptors who work in the Russian style are favored and in the other, traditional Chinese painting is presented in a superficial, jazzed-up style.

I blame official patronage for the disappointing exhibitions in such public venues as the National Gallery of Art in Beijing. It is very difficult for foreign tourists to see work that exhibits any passion or presents forms that are expressive of the contemporary temperament. Most everything is hampered by a tendency to the literal. It is hard for me to believe that contemporary Chinese artists are content with the images that are available to foreign tourists. For this reason, I tried to bring the discussions around to what they, the faculty and students, believe the future direction of Chinese art will be.

Each of the institutions offered me at least two hours of discussion time with the faculty. Two of the schools set up an opportunity for me to talk with the students. Also, students and faculty approached me on an individual basis. At one point, I had two art historians, one art critic, one painter and a photographer in my guest house room; all were there to show me their work and to talk about the latest ideas in American art.

As part of his trip to China, professor McBride visited this village on the Li River where people of all ages were eager to learn about his photography expertise.

From these discussions I have developed the perception that the Chinese artists do not have a clear idea of the direction that their art is taking. The discussions consistently revealed both a respect for traditional Chinese painting and a respect for the "western style."

The academies I visited were divided into three different departments in the area of painting; oil painting, water color, and traditional Chinese painting. In America, there would be one painting department it would offer courses in oil painting, water colors, etc., but would not separate them into distinct majors. In the minds of the academies' faculty, oil painting implies the use of the Russian style and the water color paintings that I saw in the studios were primarily in the Russian style although faculty work exhibited some flexibility in uniting the Russian style with Chinese forms. Of course, the traditional Chinese painting, by virtue of its careful discipline, remains true to its traditional form.

I think that the confusion about the direction of contemporary art stems from the strong respect that the artists have for the traditional style while, at the same time wishing to be part of the international contemporary scene and viewing this by way of an education in the Russian, ie. conservative, style. Those artists who are trying to be "modern" (whose work I have seen) are working in a surrealist style or an expressionist style. I didn't meet anyone who was experimenting with total abstraction. I suspect that the Chinese artist has no need for total abstraction.

In the conversations, there was a consistent expression of concern for communicating to the public. Thus, the most obscure the artists seem to get is to juxtapose unrelated objects or experiences in their pictures in a surrealist manner. They do not seem to be attracted to collage; even in the surrealist use of it to create dislocations or dysfunctions of objects.

In New York and Berlin many artists have been hanging images on the wall that have objects projecting as much as six feet into the space of the room. Julian Schnable with his broken plates and tree trunks or Frank Stella with his welded aluminum planes, are not as interested to the artists I met as are the photorealists, Andrew Wyeth, Vincent Van Gogh and Salvador Dali.

While it is evident that Chinese artists have some "catching up" to do in terms of contemporary ideas in art, I do not think that the interest in artists whose work in "realistic" is a sign of provincialism. I think it reflects a genuine cultural preference. I think that if it is allowed to move in a direction away from Marxist aesthetics, Chinese art will still pursue communicating through subject matter.

It is the Chinese perception that they have some catching up to do; that "there is a gap." More than once the feeling that China is behind the west in art was expressed. However, there is no clarity in their answers as to just what it is that is missing in Chinese art that is happening in western art. The closest anyone would come was to talk about the lack of respect contemporary Chinese art seems to have in the world art market.

It is difficult to get people to divorce the satisfaction of creating forms that express the contemporary condition from the satisfaction of economic and critical success. There is the underlying suspicion that if something is good, people will be exhibiting it and paying large quantities of money for it.

My own feeling of what was being communicated was that the younger artists are dissatisfied with the passionless Russian style of painting and sculpture, but have yet to find a viable substitute. Thus, they are engaged in trying many new ideas and are eager to hear what is going on in the west. Two questions frequently asked everywhere I went were: "What are the newest ideas in New York?" and "How does Chinese contemporary art compare to western contemporary art?"

As I indicated earlier, the system discourages innovation. One artist said, "An artist has to adhere to the party line. If he goes too far, he will be 'reminded.' It is easier, more comfortable to be 'lazy.' A lot of artists just choose to be lazy. They don't try to fight it." Other artists are engaged in making "basement art." One student told me that if I wanted to see what the latest ideas in Chinese art are, I should look at the basement art.

Since that point, I have asked about basement art and have found that people are eager to discuss new ideas and are willing to show me what they are doing. The best of the oil paintings that I saw were in an expressionist style. I saw a lot of heavy-handed surrealism where the painted surface was forced to fit the subjects in the painting. The expressionist work, at least, married the brush work with the subject matter. I haven't seen any paintings that exhibit an understanding of color as it is used in the west. There seems to be more sensitivity to the use of values than to hues.

For me, the most interesting work is being done in Professor McBride teaches a class at the Lu Xuu Academy of Art in Shenyang.

Traditional Chinese Painting. As a form, it offers a wide variety of expression. It has the advantage of having been part of Chinese culture for hundreds of years. The flexibility of line provides a wide range of interpretation within the disciplined structure. I saw the work of one man who was making hanging scrolls. The subject was a city at the edge of a river. The motif had been repeated at least three dozen times on scrolls as tall as I am and each one exhibited such a free use of calligraphic marks that the subject became dissolved in a dynamic balance of lines piercing the space of the picture in contrasting rhythms. Some lines moved very fluidly. Others seemed to bend and twist in awkward changes of speed. Ink bursts penetrated the viewer's consciousness as he looked from object to object in a harmonious but tenuously balanced space. I felt that I was connecting with someone who is articulating what it means to be Chinese in 1988.

I also saw the work of a young photographer who was taking risks with his images. Instead of the formula clichés of happy people enjoying the good life, he captures images of dislocation, a people in conflict and the superficiality of shallow lifestyles. Many of his pictures present a single figure isolated in an inhospitable environment; a busy street at night, a crumbling ruin, or a room of glass, chrome and plastic. His work is spontaneous and he shoots on the street or in dance halls. One theme that recurs is the superficiality of the glamorous dance hall life. He shows a China populated by unhappy dissatisfied people. Because of the political riskiness of his work, the photographer has lost some of his friends. Not able to afford a darkroom of his own, other photographers no longer let him use theirs.

I tried to find out if there was a way for artists who are trying out new ideas to communicate with each other. But as far as I could determine, no such grapevine exists. This condition was underscored by the enthusiasm with which my visits were greeted. Ironically Chinese artists appear to have more success finding out what is happening in New York or Berlin than they have in finding out what is happening in other parts of the country. When I asked the people at the academies if they knew of artists working in isolation away from the art centers, they seemed to have never considered the possibility before. Some talked about peasant farmers decorating the walls of their houses. Others seemed to feel that anything worth seeing was located in the cultural centers. Perhaps it is in the best interest of the artists to remain in the cultural centers, but I am curious to know if there are any people, like the Literati of the Song Dynasty, who have removed themselves from "society" to pursue more freedom in their work.

In speculating on the future of Chinese painting, I would suspect that greater strides will be made in the Traditional style because of its flexibility of expression within a limited acceptable form. The challenge for younger artists will be to develop a style that is recognizably contemporary while being recognizably Chinese.

The faculty and administration at the academies I visited, did not seem resistant to the students' interest in contemporary western styles. In fact some talked about the need to modernize. However, the people outside of the academies who influence the patronage of art, will have to become more accepting before we see any of the new attitudes of the young artists exhibited in public.

If someone was interested in getting more information about ideas that are being entertained by young artists, I would recommend the type of arrangement that I have made with the academies. Because of my grant, I was able to write directly to the academies of each province and offer to lecture for free. Because there was no cost to them, they were able to invite me without having to get approval from the ministry.

Schools that could not have afforded it otherwise, were grateful to have someone come and talk about contemporary ideas in art. Because of this, they were quite willing to arrange meetings with faculty and students for me. As it became apparent to them that I was open to their new ideas, faculty and students began to show me their work and the work of other artists in the community. If someone was able to visit all of the academies that invited me and pursue the potential contacts that I had made, he or she would probably be able to develop a bigger picture of what is happening in art in contemporary China.

It is hard to say if the Democracy Movement in April and May has changed any attitudes towards the current styles of art. Much of what I experienced was the result of China's opening to the western nations and a desire on the artist's part to catch up with the stylistic developments, particularly in America. If China tries to blame the Democracy Movement on America, then I would expect the artists to act prudently; which would mean making conservative works of art. CBS interviewed a contemporary artist during the high point of the demonstrations. When they went to his house after the crackdown for a follow-up interview, they found that he had moved his entire family and had left no forwarding address.

I am sure that artists will continue making "basement art", but it will probably be a long time before they feel comfortable admitting it to strangers. Last December, there was an exhibit of nudes at the National Gallery of Art in Beijing. Even though conservative government officials condemned the show as being immoral and decadent, the show was allowed to remain in place. I would suspect that the artists who were working with the nude motif, have put them away. They will probably be kept out of sight for a long time. There are a billion Chinese people who have been enjoying the benefits of their nation's experiment with economic reform and have gotten used to dreaming about a better way of life. This might cause the future to not be as predictable as I picture it. With a population as large as China's, it can certainly be a land of surprises.

AROUND AND BEYOND CAMPUS

Daughter of Slain Civil Rights Leader Speaks at Juniata

Yolanda King presented her speech entitled "A Dream Deferred" to a full house on Juniata's campus as part of Black History Month.

Yolanda King, the oldest child of slain civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King and Coretta Scott King, spoke at Juniata College in February as part of Black History Month activities at the college. The title of Ms. King's presentation was "A Dream Deferred."

At 33, Ms. King has devoted her life to the continuation of the struggle for equality and a better life for blacks, which her father began in the turbulent sixties. In her presentation she discussed her father's dream, what the civil rights movement was all about and how the dream lives on today, nearly 21 years after Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. was gunned down by an assassin in Memphis.

Born in Montgomery, Alabama, two weeks before Rosa Parks refused to give up her seat on the bus, triggering the movement that ultimately desegregated the South, Ms. King has been in the midst of the struggle for human rights all of her life. She has participated in numerous civil rights demonstrations and has spoken before countless religious, educational, civic, and human rights groups.

Growing up in a home environment deeply involved in service to humanity, Ms. King naturally assimilated this value. In a recent article in EBONY, she pointed out that "when you grow up in an environment where that kind of commitment and dedication is not just talked about but lived so fully, so honestly, there is no way that it does not take root in your being.

"They say that the best lessons, the best sermons, are the one's that are lived. There is no way," she said, "I could be true to what is so much a part of me if I did not feel a responsibility to carry on and do what I can to further the unfinished work."

Committed to using her acting talent in service to humanity, Ms. King has combined her active involvement in social change with her artistic pursuits. According to Ms. King, "Working in the performing arts requires an ability to fully share one's self and to empathize with others. In addition, the arts have dramatic impact upon people's lives and contribute to the shaping of attitudes and opinions."

Ms. King went on to explain, "While it is imperative to actively challenge the forces that deny human beings their rights to a decent life... one must also stimulate and alter the hearts and minds of both the privileged as well as those who have been too long denied. Within the arts lies the power."

Ms. King's involvements have reflected this belief. In addition to working with a number of human rights organizations and causes, Ms. King was a founding member of Christian Theatre Artists and has taught theatre to young people and college students. She presently serves as co-director of NUCLEUS along with Attallah Shabazz

(the eldest child of Malcolm X and Dr. Betty Shabazz). NUCLEUS is a company of performing artists dedicated to promoting positive energy through the arts.

Ms. King's film credits as an actress include the role of Rosa Parks in King, an NBC made-for-television movie; the manageress in Hopscotch; and the role of Betty Shabazz in The Death of a Prophet about Malcolm X. She has worked as an associate producer and consultant in television and film projects.

Ms. King serves on the Board of Directors of the Martin Luther King, Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change, Inc. (the official national memorial to Dr. King) and is director of The King Center's Cultural Affairs Program. Through the Cultural Affairs Program, she produces a variety of artistic events designed to celebrate the common humanity that all people share.

Ms. King is a lifetime member of the N.A.A.C.P., the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the Fellowship of Reconciliation, the National Association of Negro Business and Professional Women, the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, and the Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta, Georgia.

Ms. King's program was sponsored by the Juniata College Center Board, Student Government, and the Peace and Conflict Studies Committee.

Juniata Names New Vice President

Dr. Karen Wiley Sandler, former associate provost at Gettysburg College, has been named vice president and dean of academic affairs at Juniata College.

Dr. Sandler, who began her duties at Juniata July 1, was selected from among 125 individuals applying for the position. Following an intensive interview and screening process involving college faculty, administrators, and students, Dr. Sandler emerged as the leading candidate.

Dr. Sandler expressed her optimism for Juniata and the role she will play in the college's future. "During the interviews," she said, "I came to know Juniata as a community which nourishes open investigation, intellectual growth, and a commitment to humane values. As the newest member of the faculty and administration, I look forward to contributing to such a community."

In discussing the most pressing priorities for the college, Dr. Sandler noted that future strength should be built upon the strengths traditionally associated with the institution. "It is tempting to think only of the challenges facing an institution and Juniata is not atypical in its needs," Dr. Sandler said.

"I applaud the student centered outcomes approach being proposed at Juniata," she said. "A curriculum based on outcomes strikes me as rational, humane, and extremely effective."

"The strategic planning currently underway at the college is crucial if Juniata is to remain proactive in our changing environment. To me planning is a contemporary word for reflection, and reflection, as we all know, is an old and cherished liberal arts concept," Dr. Sandler said.

Dr. Sandler noted the attractiveness of the Juniata curriculum in providing students breadth of learning across disciplines as well as depth within their intended field of study. "Curricula often fall apart by concentrating on one or the other," Dr. Sandler noted. "The combination of breadth and depth is a very attractive part of the Juniata experience."

A member of the Gettysburg College administration and faculty since 1985, Dr. Sandler comes to Juniata with a diverse background in academic affairs, student services, and teaching. She received her bachelor of arts degree in French in 1964 from The Principia College, followed by completion of her masters degree in French from The Pennsylvania State University. Dr. Sandler completed requirements for her Ph.D. in romance languages in 1972 from The University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Sandler held faculty appointments at The University of Vermont from 1969 through 1985. She currently holds a non-tenured appointment in the French department at Gettysburg College, teaching Freshman Colloquy in Liberal Learning and serving as a freshmen advisor.

Dr. Sandler's first involvement in college administrative work came in 1982 when she served as coordinator of workshops on academic advising and coordinator of the instructional incentive grants program of the College of Arts and Sciences and the Instructional Development Center at The University of Vermont.

In 1983, Dr. Sandler assumed the position special assistant to the dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at the university. As the special assistant she advised students having academic difficulty, conducted academic advising workshops and monitored study abroad and honors programs.

From 1984 to 1985 Dr. Sandler served the university as acting assistant dean and director of student affairs for the College of Arts and Sciences. As such, she planned and carried out programs for parents and students, advised department chairs on scheduling and curricular issues, advised the curriculum committee on enrollment patterns, and planned the college's commencement program.

Dr. Sandler began her tenure at Gettysburg in 1985 as the assistant provost. Among her many duties and responsibilities she chaired the Academic Standing Committee, initiated a retention study and implemented the recommendations resulting from the study, advised the provost on major restructuring of academic advising and support services, and chaired the Orientation Task Force which was charged with revamping the freshman year experience.

In 1988 Dr. Sandler assumed the responsibilities of associate provost with particular emphasis on curricular innovation including writing across the curriculum, core or related course design, critical thinking, and women's studies programs. Among Dr. Sandler's other responsibilities she prepares the academic support budget for all departments, works with faculty on the development of grant proposals, and works closely with all academic committees on advising and enrollment development.

"My future colleagues at Juniata are committed teachers," Dr. Sandler said. "They enjoy their work, and are dedicated to their students, serving them conscientiously and working extremely well with them. All of the people associated with the college made me feel very much at home during my visit. I am looking forward to our association."

Victim of Brutal New York City Slashing Presents Program at Juniata

The Juniata College Joint Lectureship Committee of Center Board and Student Government presented a presentation by attack victim Marla Hanson in April.

An up-and-coming New York City model, Hanson's career was brutally interrupted when her face was slashed by two men hired by her landlord. The razor slashing followed a dispute over an $850 security deposit. The incident and subsequent trial, which occurred in 1986, drew national attention and prompted the victim to launch a crusade as an advocate for victims rights.

Following the incident, Hanson's plastic surgeon, Dr. Ronald Levandusky, reported in the New York Times "that the gashes on her face — one across her right cheek from mouth to ear, another on her forehead and others above and below her left eye — were among the worst he had seen in years of practice."

Actress Marla Hanson, the victim of a brutal New York City slashing spoke to JC students about her experience.

"They were a bit worse than cuts suffered by someone going through a windshield," he said in the Times article. "All of them are at least one-half inch and most are one inch deep. If they heal well, they could be improved... but basically scars like this are permanent." The account went on to quote Dr. Levandusky as saying, "After I finished suturing her up... I said to myself, 'How could men push a woman like this down and carve her face.'"

To many Marla Hanson became a hero following the often emotional month-long trial in which her landlord was found guilty of first-degree assault. In her presentation Hanson explained the brutal incident which occurred outside the West Side Manhattan bar. "Their hands went straight for my face — they pushed me down," she said, demonstrating how she was shoved into a crouch against a wall and her face held in position by one man while another stood over her with the razor.

"I felt a stinging," she said. "I thought maybe they were spraying something in my eyes or my face. The taller man started moving his hands back and forth," she said. "For a minute, a minute-and-a-half, it continued," she said. "It seemed like forever.

"I started to scream, or I felt like I was screaming," she said. "I ran toward the light and back into the bar." In the bar, Miss Hanson said she was given towels to hold to her bleeding face. "They told me to sit down, take a few deep breaths, and not look in the mirror," she said. Her wounds, treated later at Metropolitan Hospital, required nearly 150 stitches.

What prompted Hanson to take her story on the road, however, was not the notorious attack which left visible scars on the face of the then 25-year-old actress. What prompted her advocacy for victim's rights was the courtroom assault which followed the attack.

The ordeal of several trials in which it frequently seemed that she was being blamed for the crime committed against her instilled in her a profound interest in judicial reform and she is currently involved in drafting the legislation to address the needs of crime victims.

"A victim's rights aren't defined, therefore, they aren't protected," Hanson said. "The accused are immediately read their Miranda Rights and offered free counsel while the victim, being just a witness for the prosecution, is offered neither."

She added that because the prosecution has the burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt, the defense tries to put the victim on trial. "If you're going to have that, then it should be equal treatment for both people... There is no balance right now — everything goes to the defendant."

Juniata Student Receives One of Only 40 National Minority Fellowships

Mary A. Fortson's life has been filled with a long string of mountains to climb and challenges to overcome. She has had to persevere through being orphaned at fifteen; quitting high school; and becoming a single parent. Through it all, the Mt. Union resident has maintained a belief that she would achieve great things for herself and for others.

As a junior English and secondary education major at Juniata College, Mary Fortson is about to take a giant step closer to making a difference. She has been selected to be among 40 college students in the nation, one of only two from Pennsylvania, to receive a prestigious Minority Leaders Fellowship offered by The Washington Center located in Washington, D.C.

The Minority Leaders Fellowship Program gives talented and motivated young Americans of minority descent the opportunity to spend ten weeks in Washington in an intensive educational experience. The fellowship will combine active learning with exposure to national leaders.

The program will encourage each of the 40 students to be involved in leadership, to confirm their commitment to making a difference in society, and to understand and accept the greater responsibilities of being a leader — on any scale.

Ms. Fortson's abilities to lead are evident from the long list of activities she has been a part of at Juniata and in her community. She is the student director of the Writing Center at Juniata, is a member of the Writers' Club and the Readers' Club at the college, and is a peer advisor for freshmen students. She is also a member of the Juniata College Honor Society.

Ms. Fortson is a founding member of the Mt. Union Substance Abuse Task Force, serves as superintendent and teacher at the Mt. Hope Baptist Church

Junia Alumnus Appointed Executive Director of East-West Forum

James F. Montgomery, a 1957 graduate of Junia College, has been appointed Executive Director of the East-West Forum following a distinguished career of over thirty years with the U.S. Department of State. Mr. Montgomery was Senior Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Human Rights and Humanitarian Affairs from December 1985 to July 1987. As a foreign service officer, his tours of duty included Thailand, Vietnam, South Africa, Mexico and Washington, D.C.

The East-West Forum was established in 1986 by Edgar M. Bronfman, chairman and chief executive officer of The Seagram Company Ltd., who serves as president. According to Mr. Bronfman, "The East-West Forum was established with the determination to create a more thorough understanding of superpower relations in their totality. It encourages expert analysis from all perspectives to develop recommendations for long-term, pragmatic management of the process that drives them."

The activities of the forum have included an analysis of the effect of Gorbachev's reform policies on Soviet-Western relations which provided the basis for the Forum's first international conference in Ditchley, England in February of 1988. More than 35 policy analysts and experts gathered for the conference.

The second international conference was held in October of 1988, in Bonn, Federal Republic of Germany. The conference focused on changes in Central and Eastern Europe, the region's interactions with Gorbachev's reforms, and the West's policy options. Mr. Bronfman said, "Jim

Sunday School, and served on the board of directors of the Tri-County Community Counseling Agency.

A long list of honors received by Ms. Fortson includes being named to Who's Who in American Colleges, the National Dean's List, and the listing of Outstanding College Students of America. She has also received the Mt. Union Citizenship Scholarship for the past two years.

Selection of the 40 Minority Fellows began with an invitation to the nation's 3,000 colleges and universities to nominate a candidate for the prestigious award. Following an exhaustive process of application and review, the field was narrowed to the top 100 candidates who were then evaluated and screened by members of a Blue-Ribbon panel composed of academic and professional leaders. The panel then selected the 40 students to receive the all-expenses-paid fellowships.

In her application material Ms. Fortson outlined some of her concerns for the future of our society. "Violence, poverty, and racial hatred are commonly cited as major problems that need to be addressed today. They are important issues," she said. "Our continued existence hinges on whether we allow them to continue to grow and destroy us.

"I see them, however, not as isolated issues," she said, "but as the visible effects of the disintegrating value of human rights. Consider — violence is the violation of the rights of others; poverty is the result of Society's lack of concern for people's basic survival needs; and racial hatred is bred through the ignorance and disregard of another's human rights.

"As a future educator," Ms. Fortson added, "I can influence young people through instruction of what has been done, and more importantly what needs to be done, through effective and persuasive expression of those ideas essential for confronting and addressing human rights issues. Countless revolutionary changes have been started by convincing people, through effective rhetorical devices, that they could produce results.

"I'm not so unrealistic," she concluded, "to think my life's contribution will eradicate these problems. However, I am idealistic enough to believe I can make a difference."

The Washington Center is the largest independent, nonprofit organization that enables students to earn college credit for internships and academic seminars in the nation's capital. Since it was founded in 1975, the Center has provided 13,000 college students with real world experiences that have helped them gain the critical knowledge and preparation they need to begin fulfilling careers.

The Minority Leaders Fellowship began on June 2 and will conclude on August 11.

Prior to assuming his role as Executive Director of the East-West Forum, Mr. Montgomery was a research fellow at the Foreign Service Institute's Center for the Study of Foreign Affairs in Washington, D.C. His last foreign post was as U.S. Consul General in Johannesburg, South Africa.

Before serving as Senior Deputy Assistant of State for Human Rights and Humanitarian Affairs, Mr. Montgomery was Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Legislative Affairs from May 1981 to December 1985.

CALENDAR SET

The Cultural Events Calendar is set for the 1989-90 academic year with more than 85 events scheduled.

The highlight of the calendar is the Artist Series events. Twelve performances of music, dance and theatre will delight audiences this season. Anyone interested in becoming a Friend, Patron or Benefactor for the Series should contact Nan Hunt, director of the Annual Support Fund, at (814) 643-4310.

Dr. Joseph Good '33 and his wife Jane recommend the pooled income fund to Juniata alumni as a way to make a planned gift to the College.

Focus on Planned Giving— Juniata's Pooled Income Fund

In the January issue of the Bulletin, Focus on Planned Giving introduced a number of ideas on how alumni and friends of Juniata help the College by making gifts that generate income for themselves and benefit Juniata in the future. One example of a gift of this nature is one to Juniata's Pooled income fund.

To participate in the pooled fund, a donor transfers property (ie. cash/securities) to the College's fund, and retains a life income interest in the property. "Jane and I thought a gift to the pooled fund was the best of all possible worlds," stated Dr. Joseph R. Good '33. "We are receiving an income that is above average and have the pleasure of knowing that our gift will help secure Juniata's future." Jane and Joseph Good of Hollidaysburg, Pa. have been in the pooled income fund for a number of years. The property that is transferred to the fund is managed by Juniata along with other property transferred to it by all other donors. The management of the assets of all donors, as a group, minimizes investment risk and maximizes investment opportunities for each individual donor. Currently, the fund is earning almost nine (9%) percent for its participants.

"When we established our first pooled income contract with Juniata, we funded the account with appreciated securities. Ones that had a low yield and great potential for substantial capital gains taxes." Joseph said, "By doing that, we saved paying capital gains taxes and at the same time realized an increase to our income." Additionally, a gift to the pooled income fund may provide the donor with income tax benefits and reduce the estate tax obligations. Dr. Good concluded that, "a gift to Juniata's Pooled Income Fund is one way to have your cake and eat it too."

Peter Trexler, Paul Heberling, Mary Ruth Linton and Howard Crouch were honored for their service to Juniata College at the faculty/trustee dinner this spring.

Five Retiring Professors to Gain Emeritus Status

Five retiring professors have been granted professor emeriti status according to President Robert W. Neff. The announcement was made following the action of the board during Trustees Weekend in May.

The five professors, Howard Crouch, Paul Heberling, Mary Ruth Linton, Ernest Post, and Peter Trexler, are now granted all the privileges of a full-time faculty member in a retirement role, according to Dr. Neff.

Dr. Crouch, a Juniata faculty member since 1963, is a former chairman of the education department and the college's social sciences division. In addition to his teaching duties, he has also served as director of Juniata's Early Childhood Education Center.

A 1949 graduate of the Ohio State University, he received his M.Ed. degree from Westminster College in 1953 and his Ph.D. from Ohio State in 1964. He has also done some post-doctoral studies in Ohio and at the University of Florida.

Dr. Crouch resides in Huntingdon with his wife, the former Hazel Black. The Crouches have three children.

Professor Paul Heberling, a Juniata faculty member since 1957, has served as director of treatment at Rockview State Correctional Institution in Huntingdon, as psychologist, and as an instructor in community recreation programs in State College.

A 1948 graduate of the Pennsylvania State University, he received his masters degree in psychology and sociology from Penn State in 1950. In 1969 Professor Heberling received the second annual Beachley Distinguished Professor award from Juniata.

He and his wife, Ann Louise, live in Huntingdon and have three children.

Juniata Board Chairman Presents Commencement Address

In an address delivered to nearly 250 graduates of Juniata College, Juniata Board of Trustees chairman and distinguished lecturer at Georgetown University Charles C. Ellis, charged students to never lose sight of the fact that our most important assets are within us and not outside of us. The address was presented on May 14 as part of the college's 110th commencement activities.

"Our intelligence, character, skills, talents, and physical stamina," Dr. Ellis said, "are just a few of the things that can bring us true happiness and satisfaction. Our external assets, although more visible, can easily be destroyed or taken away from us."

Dr. Ellis spoke of a revolution about which few people are aware. This revolution consists of the "movement away from an economy in which the only things of real value are those you can see, touch, kick, and count . . . , to one in which real values include things that you can't see, or count and are often difficult to describe or measure.

"Today materialism is dying," he said. "It is dying because the tangible things which have been sought after throughout history have become abundant and commonplace." This has led us to become a society in which the service professions will become more prevalent.

"Today, in fact," Dr. Ellis noted, "service industries are the backbone of not only our economy, but those of Japan, Canada, Germany, Italy, and Great Britain. . . . In all likelihood most of you members of the class of 1989 will be employed in a service industry. Here your liberal arts education will be a great advantage."

In conclusion, Dr. Ellis noted the greatest benefit of this revolution is to draw our attention away from tangible things, and toward those things which are of true value — "our intelligence, character, skills, talents, and physical stamina."

decades of service to the college Board of Trustees, Dr. Robert W. Neff, president of the college, presented to Dr. Ellis a painting which depicts some of his life's achievements.

The painting, executed by artist Loa Joan Stern of Roaring Spring, features a naval lieutenant's shoulder board, representing the years Dr. Ellis spent in service to his country from 1942 to 1946; college seals from Juniata and Georgetown; a computer printout with the names of the companies Dr. Ellis worked for during his 36 year career; music and a violin, representing his love of and dedication to music and the arts; and carpentry tools, representing his love of wood working.

In introducing Dr. Ellis, Dr. Neff stressed the 1940 Juniata graduate's dedication to his alma mater. "His keen mind and commanding personality have helped guide Juniata to a position of high regard for educational excellence and scholastic achievement," he said.

"Today we recognize Dr. Ellis with this painting which highlights not only his service to Juniata College, but also his lifelong dedication to his country, to his career, to the arts, to the creative fulfillment gained from working with his hands, and to personal enrichment through continued learning," Dr. Neff said.

"This year," he went on to say, "Dr. Ellis will close another chapter in his life's anthology when he retires as a distinguished lecturer at Georgetown University's School of Business Administration. However, if I know Charles C. Ellis the collection of achievements is far from complete."

An exceptional scholar, businessman, and educator, Charles C. Ellis is a 1940 honors graduate of Juniata. He earned his M.B.A. from Harvard University in 1942, and was awarded an honorary L.L.D. degree from Juniata in 1981.

After retiring in 1982 as executive vice president for long range financial planning at RCA, the corporation he was associated with for 10 years, Dr. Ellis became a Distinguished Lecturer at Georgetown University's School of Business Administration. Prior to RCA, Dr. Ellis had been associated with the Irving Trust Company, Philco-Ford Corp., Kordite Corp., Ford Motor Company, Armstrong Cork Company and the United States Navy.

The author of numerous articles and speeches on financial management, Dr. Ellis has served as director of such corporations as Hertz, Banquet, Cushman and Wakefield, Coronet Industries, Random House, and the Fred F. French Investment Company.

Dr. Ellis maintains an avid interest in the arts and serves as the chairman of the board of directors of the Pro Musicas Foundation. His interest in higher education has led him to lecture at Columbia University, Rutgers University and the University of Michigan.

For the last 13 years Dr. Ellis has served the Board of Trustees as chairman, and the accomplishments have been outstanding. With his leadership Juniata College has established a position of fiscal integrity. His efforts for the improvement of Juniata's programs have kept the College at the forefront of innovation in higher education. It was Dr. Ellis who helped lead the way for the development of the athletic facilities and programs at Juniata. With a personal dedication to wholeness in education he worked tirelessly to more fully integrate all facets of the college experience.

He and his wife, the former Jean Good, have a devotion to fine music and art. It was a mutual interest in music that brought Charles Ellis and Jean Good together as students in the early forties. That interest remains alive today in their personal lives and in their encouragement for the arts at Juniata.

Juniata Honors Faculty Members With Distinguished Teaching Awards

Four Juniata College faculty members, Dr. David R. Drews, Mary Ruth Linton, Dr. Ronald K. McLaughlin, and Dr. Karen J. Rosell, were honored this spring with the distinguished teaching awards during the college's 110th commencement ceremonies.

Dr. Drews, a professor of psychology, was honored with the twenty-second annual Beachley Distinguished Professor Award. Mrs. Linton, a professor of music, was presented the newly established Beachley Award for Distinguished Academic Service. And, in an unprecedented move, Dr. McLaughlin, an associate professor of psychology, and Dr. Rosell, an assistant professor of art, were each honored with the twelfth annual Lindback Foundation Award for Distinguished Teaching.

The Beachley Awards were established by Donovan R. Beachley, Sr., a graduate of Juniata in 1921 and an emeritus member of the Board of Trustees; Donovan R. Beachley, Jr., a member of the class of 1947 and a current member of the Board of Trustees; and Mrs. Donovan R. Beachley, Jr., all of Hagerstown, Md.

The Beachley Distinguished Professor Award provides a $2,500 stipend to a professor who contributes to the development of the nominee's department and the college as a whole. Teaching effectiveness, scholarly activities, service beyond the campus, and length of service to the college are also important factors.

The Beachley Distinguished Academic Service Award also provides a $2,500 stipend. The award is made to a professor showing outstanding service to students through advising, counseling, or development of student-related activities, and outstanding service to the college through curriculum or department development, committee activities, or college wide activities.

Nominations for the awards are received from students, faculty, administrative personnel, alumni and trustees. The final selections are made by the college president, the dean of academic affairs, the student government president, and the three most recent recipients of the award.

The past three Distinguished Professor Award recipients have been Dr. Robert E. Wagoner, professor of philosophy (1988); George Dolnikowski, associate professor of Russian and German emeritus (1987); and Dr. Donald J. Mitchell, professor of chemistry (1986).

Dr. Drews joined the faculty in 1969 as an assistant professor. He was promoted to associate professor in 1982, and to full professor in 1983.

Dr. Drews received his B.A. degree from Denison University in 1965, his M.S. degree from the University of Delaware in 1969, and his Ph.D. in 1970, also from the University of Delaware.

Dr. Drews, who has been widely published in journals and periodicals, came to Juniata from NASA where he served as a research fellow from 1966 to 1969.

Mrs. Linton, a Juniata faculty member from 1942-1951 and since 1963, has served as the chairperson of the music department for many years. A 1938 graduate of Juniata, she received her M.A. degree from the Eastman School of Music in 1939. She has served as the director of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association, and as a member of the board of directors of Franklin Concerts, Inc., of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Linton's late husband formerly served as the District Attorney of Huntingdon.

Funded by the Christian R. and Mary F. Lindback Foundation of Philadelphia, the Lindback Award provides a $500 stipend to each of the recipients. Selection criteria include contribution to the total educational effort of the college, and outstanding work by a junior faculty member who has served the college for seven or fewer years.

The award recipient is selected by the college president who is assisted by a committee of faculty members. Last year's recipient was Dr. Fay I. Glosenger, associate professor of education.

Dr. McLaughlin joined the Juniata faculty in 1985 as an assistant professor of psychology. He was promoted to associate professor in 1988. Prior to coming to the college Dr. McLaughlin was an assistant professor at St. Norbert College after teaching as an instructor at Northwestern University.

In 1982 she completed her M.A. degree at Virginia Commonwealth University where she also served as a teaching assistant. Dr. Rosell received her Ph.D. degree in 1986 from Ohio University. She served as a teaching associate at Ohio University from 1982-1986.

Dr. Neff presents Marilyn Shaw with her well deserved diploma during commencement activities.

Juniata Student Overcomes Obstacles to Receive Diploma

She's 55, a mother, grandmother, and widow; on May 14, she became a Juniata College graduate. Marilyn Shaw's success story is one of pain, patience, prayer and perseverance.

Born in San Diego, California in 1933, Marilyn received her early education at San Diego High School. She began her college career at San Diego Junior College in the fall of 1951. That winter, at the insistence of a close friend, she agreed to go on a blind date with Robert Dale Shaw, a Newry, Pa. native on active duty with the United States Navy. "Three weeks later, on February 19, 1952 I married him!" Marilyn said with a smile on her face. He and Marilyn did a lot of travelling back and forth from California to Pennsylvania in the early months of their marriage.

However, only ten months after they exchanged their vows, they were faced with something that would affect their lives together. "Dale was 23 and we had only been married 10 months when he suffered seven consecutive heart attacks," Marilyn said. At that point he had to retire from the Navy and began working in the dry wall business, Marilyn began to work too.

His condition worsened and by 1958 he could not work at all. "In 1967 he had two strokes and had to stay at home. During this time I was working in different factories and we travelled back and forth from veterans' hospitals in San Diego and Altoona. I worked in shoe factories and clothing factories in Williamsport, and made shoe boxes in Martinsburg, and men's shirts and trousers at Big Yank in Tyrone. I worked as a shipping clerk once and as an inspector for Erie Technological Products in State College. In San Diego I worked for an electronics firm assembling circuit boards and reading blue prints. I even managed an apartment house in San Diego," she said.

During this time, Marilyn's husband stayed at home and raised their three sons, Austin, Kenneth, and Frank. Two of Marilyn's sons are currently living in Huntingdon County and the third son is a Navy officer stationed in Scotland. Marilyn treated herself to 21 days in Scotland following graduation. Her sons and daughters-in-law have made her the proud grandmother of seven grandchildren ranging in age from 1 to 16.

Juniata College came to play a big role in their lives in 1982. "A notice had come out in one of the veteran magazines that veteran's wives who were eligible for educational benefits had better use them because the bill was going to run out. My husband said if I was going to get my education I needed to get it before 1985 according to the notice," Marilyn explained. "We were living in Marklesburg at the time and I figured I could finish in time, because Juniata accepted the credits from my one semester in San Diego from 1952.

I commuted from Marklesburg everyday for class until 1984. In 1984, my husband started going blind, he wouldn't tell us, but we noticed it in his driving. He turned in his license on his own and I began to do all the driving. We had to return to the hospital in San Diego at that time, so I put the house up for sale, packed everything, withdrew from Juniata and drove a U-Haul 700 miles a day to California. The hospital was doing extensive research on eyes and we hoped they could correct the problem," she said.

His vision never changed, and by April of 1985 he was totally blind. From that point on all we did was travel, from Massachusetts to the Everglades," she said. Just one day before their 35th wedding anniversary, Robert Dale Shaw died of a heart attack. "On February 19, 1952, I began my life with Dale and on February 19, 1987, I began my new life as a widow," she said. How did she persevere through this tragic life of love and commitment? "I believed that God would see to our needs and bring us through all of this," she said.

"My son took me in his arms after the funeral and said 'Mom now it's time for you to do something for yourself'," Marilyn said.

I didn't want to waste the education I had, so I decided to come back to Juniata. Dale had hoped that I would have my degree before he died so that I would have that to fall back on. But of course when he went blind I couldn't stay in school. I started back in August of 1987 and now two years later it's time to graduate," she said.

"Juniata has been a real challenge for me. I realized that I couldn't keep the same pace as the younger students, so I set my own pace and it has worked out really well," she said. "I've had a lot of catching up to do in the thirty some years I've been out of school. The hardest part was working on good study habits. I really had to discipline myself to study. When I got on to the idea of fulfilling my dream of having a career in art and photography, that's when everything started to fall into place," Marilyn said.

The pace Marilyn set for herself is a furious one, driven by an intense desire to succeed. Aside from her studies, she has been a member of Center Board, co-chairperson of the fine arts committee, student representative to the arts and lectureship committee and volunteer for Special Olympics, just to name a few of her activities. This year she decided to try life in a residence hall. "I knew this was the only chance I would get to try living in a residence hall and I didn't want to miss the opportunity." She and her roommate, an exchange student from Germany, have developed a close friendship.

Following graduation, Marilyn will continue her photography and art business in Huntingdon County. Licensed at the federal and state levels, she has won awards throughout the country for black and white prints, drawings and paintings. Perhaps her most exciting recent endeavor is the child's book and illustrations that she has done for a class. That book, entitled "The Prize," is currently being printed. In her spare time she continues to travel, and enjoys skating, fishing and hunting.

A dream has been fulfilled for Marilyn, a dream that began in 1951. "I could never have done this without the support of my family, the faculty and staff and especially the students. Everyone has been really good about accepting me. This Juniata experience has been so rewarding for me, I would recommend it to anyone. Just have faith in God and anything is possible. Don't let life stagnate. Keep learning new things and make your life as enriching as possible. Life is a learning situation. Go out and see what's there," she concluded. While pain, prayer and patience have been prevalent in Marilyn's life, her perseverance has paid off in a big way.

THE "BULL" IS HONORED DURING REUNION WEEKEND

An extremely successful "Reunion Weekend 1989" kicked off in grand fashion on Friday, May 19, when an overflow crowd attended a surprise recognition dinner and program to honor former Juniata College football coach, William "Bull" Smaltz.

Smaltz was head football and baseball coach at Juniata from 1947-53. Following his stay on College Hill, he served as a long time assistant coach at North Carolina State. Smaltz is now retired and lives in North Carolina.

An opening reception was held at the Huntingdon Country Club before hundreds of former Juniata athletes, alumni and friends filled Baker Refectory in Ellis Hall for an evening of reminiscing to honor Smaltz. For many, it also meant seeing acquaintances for the first time in many years.

After the invocation by George Kensinger '51, president of the Indian Club, the gathering was officially welcomed to the College by Juniata President Dr. Robert W. Neff. Following a "surf and turf" dinner, the program began with former Juniata stand out Donald Everhart '49 serving as master of ceremonies.

Dr. Michael Gilberti, an Aliquippa High School companion of Smaltz, spoke briefly about his boyhood memories of Smaltz while Leonard Krouse, a football teammate of Smaltz at Penn State, addressed the gathering about Smaltz's success as a passing fullback for the Nittany Lions from 1939-41. Smaltz-to-Krouse was one of the best passing combinations of that era, and both played in the 1942 East-West Shrine Game in New Orleans.

Dr. Arnold Greene, retired Huntingdon dentist and former Juniata basketball coach from 1949-61, spoke of his coaching experiences with Smaltz. Greene, a tremendous football player in his own right, served as an advisor in football to Smaltz while Smaltz also assisted Greene as junior varsity basketball coach.

Joseph Dobal '53, who played football at Juniata in 1951, entertained the audience with several stories, and mixed in a summary of the many business and professional accomplishments of Smaltz's former players. One of those former players, Pat Tarquinio '56, a Little All-American for Juniata's Tangerine Bowl team and successful high school coach in western Pennsylvania, talked about his experiences as a young quarterback under Smaltz.

Another extremely successful football coach who played under Smaltz is Seattle Seahawks head coach Chuck Knox, a 1954 Juniata graduate and senior co-captain on Smaltz's 1953 football team which finished with the school's first undefeated and untied record (7-0).

"I'm very pleased to return to recognize and honor coach Bill Smaltz," Knox said to the gathering. "There is no question that many of the coaching theories and philosophies I've developed through the years have a touch of Bill Smaltz."

"Your presence here this evening shows your dedication for a man, Bill Smaltz, who was so dedicated to us. It is also a great display of your loyalty to this fine institution — Juniata College."

Mrs. Betty Smaltz, a former instructor at Juniata and teacher in the Huntingdon Area Schools, offered the audience many fond memories before her husband, "The Bull," stood at the podium to a standing ovation.

Coach Smaltz was presented several mementos during the program, including the game ball from Juniata's 20-6 upset victory over then Eastern power Lebanon Valley College in 1947. The game ball presentation was made by Dr. Richard Stever '49.

Smaltz's contributions to Juniata College were many, as the overwhelming response of his former players, colleagues and friends indicated. He has an everlasting place in the annals of Juniata College athletics.

Before Bill Smaltz became its head football coach Juniata College had enjoyed just two winning seasons in 24 years. Seven years after Smaltz took over in 1947 Juniata had not only added six .500-plus records to the list, but topped the chart with its first undefeated football season.

The 1953 Juniata Indians, the final team under Smaltz, completed a perfect 7-0 campaign with a 21-0 victory over Ursinus. It was the beginning of a school-record 23-game winning streak, one of the longest in the nation at that time, and the first of five undefeated seasons over the next seven years. "The Glory Years — 1953-59" saw Juniata football teams win 50 games, lose two and tie two. The seeds for that tremendous success were planted by Bill Smaltz.

This portrait of Smaltz was presented during the recognition dinner. l-r. Dr. Neff, Mrs. Smaltz, Mr. Smaltz and "prize pupil" Chuck Knox.

Enthusiastic Seattle Seahawk fans surround Chuck Knox anxiously awaiting an autograph.

Coach Smaltz enjoyed seeing many familiar faces from the past.

Alumni President's Gavel is Passed

Linda Phelps of Flourtown, Pa., recently assumed the role of president of the Juniata's National Alumni Association. Aliceann Wohlbruck, outgoing president, presented the presidential gavel to Mrs. Phelps at the annual spring Alumni Council Meeting.

Mrs. Phelps, a member of the class of '66, is a fourth grade teacher for the William Penn Charter School in Philadelphia. In association with her job, she has served as program director for the Independent Schools' Teachers' Association and program chair for the Mid-Atlantic Teachers' Conference.

Klare Sunderland and Dr. David Hercules received prestigious alumni awards from Juniata College this spring.

Two Alumni Honored With Service & Achievement Awards

Juniata College's prestigious Alumni Service and Alumni Achievement awards were presented to two distinguished graduates during Reunion Weekend activities.

David M. Hercules of Pittsburgh received the Achievement Award, while Klare S. Sunderland of Camp Hill was the recipient of the Service Award.

As a professor and former chairman of the chemistry department of the University of Pittsburgh, Dr. David Hercules has become one of the leading surface science researchers in the nation.

In recognition of his pioneering work in the field, Dr. Hercules received the prestigious American Chemical Society Award in Analytical Chemistry in 1986. In 1973, as an associate professor of chemistry at the University of Georgia, Dr. Hercules was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship for research on techniques for studying chemical catalysts and surfaces.

A native of Somerset, Dr. Hercules worked for U.S. Steel in Pittsburgh during the summer following his 1954 graduation from Juniata College. He began graduate work at MIT that fall, earning his Ph.D. in 1957.

Dr. Hercules held teaching positions at Lehigh University, and Juniata College before accepting the post at the University of Pittsburgh. He served as department chair from 1980 through 1987. Dr. Hercules is married to the former Shirley Hoover, a member of Juniata's class of 1966. The couple has two children, Sherri and Kevin.

A 1956 Juniata graduate, Mr. Sunderland is president of Sun Enterprises, Inc. of Camp Hill. While still in college, he began his career in automobile retailing as a part-time salesman for Camp Hill's Sausman Chevrolet Company. Following graduation, he joined the sales force of the company.

In 1957 Mr. Sunderland earned the firm's "Top Retail Salesman" award. His positions with Sausman Chevrolet included sales manager of both the new car and new truck divisions, vice president and general manager, and, in 1969, president of the firm.

The incorporation of Sun Enterprises in 1979 provided the opportunity for Mr. Sunderland to develop additional auto dealerships and to expand with real property investment. Since that time, dealerships in Maryland and Pennsylvania have been acquired.

Mr. Sunderland has served as director of the West Shore Chamber of Commerce and vice president of the Harrisburg Area Auto Dealers' Association. He has served Juniata as a trustee since 1970, alumni gifts chairman of the Margin of Difference campaign, president of the Central Pennsylvania Alumni Club, general chair of the stadium improvement project, and trustee gifts chairman of the Sports + Recreation Center phase of the recently completed Century II Campaign.

Mr. Sunderland has three children, Debra, Donna, and Daniel, who is a member of the class of 1988.

PITTSBURGH'S SQUAIR LEAVES JUNIATA KNOWING THE JOB WAS WELL DONE

It was as close to a standing ovation as you can get during the commencement exercises at Juniata College. When Les Squair reached the platform in the Kennedy Sports and Recreation Center and received his bachelor of arts degree his smile shined big and bright and the applause rang loud and long.

Les Squair had done what so many thought he couldn't do. He had done what so many couldn't understand why he wanted to do in the first place. Les Squair, an outstanding basketball player from Pittsburgh's Hill District and City League "Player of the Year" at Schenley High School, had finished four years at a liberal arts college in rural central Pennsylvania. He had passed up the Division I and II scholarship offers and more secure routes to instead fight and claw his way to a degree at Division III Juniata.

Les Squair had applied for the financial aid, taken out the loans, put in the hours, and got what he wanted and deserved. In the process, Juniata College got back a lot more than it maybe ever expected from Les Squair. He showed this institution in Huntingdon, Pa., that you really can get what you work for and more. While most would have liked the graduation ceremony to have taken place outside as scheduled, maybe it was fitting for Les to receive his final honor at Juniata in the arena he had so often honored himself with outstanding play and leadership.

Les Squair came to Juniata College in September 1985 to join a basketball program that had struggled through 10 consecutive losing seasons. Although Juniata didn't break the .500 barrier, Les made an immediate impact on the program during his first two years. He was the team's leading rebounder and scorer as a freshman and a sophomore, and was selected as a team captain in his second season. He was ready to captain the team his junior year when he decided to forego the basketball season to concentrate on his studies.

"It had to be very difficult for Les to sit and watch his teammates finish a school-record 19-7 that year and not be able to take part in the enjoyment," said Juniata coach Dan Helm. "It was probably just another question for Les. I'm sure he spent many sleepless nights through his career wondering if he had made the right college choice.

"Les found out immediately when he came to Juniata that the academic demands here were much more than anything he was used to in high school. He had to work for everything. He had to work to survive."

Survive is what he did and it allowed him to again step onto the basketball court during his senior season. He captained Juniata to a 16-10 record, the second-best win total in school history, and helped the team earn another trip to the Middle Atlantic Conference Northern Division playoffs. Les also returned to Pittsburgh to earn MVP honors in the Carnegie Mellon Holiday Tournament, which Juniata won.

At only 6'2", Les averaged 10.2 points and 6.6 rebounds a game this season. For his career, he ranks eighth on the Juniata rebounding chart with 597 rebounds and scored 12.2 points per contest in 70 games over three seasons.

"Les did everything we asked of him on the court," said Helm. "He played inside as a power forward for us during his freshman and sophomore seasons, and ended up second in our conference in rebounding despite being the only non-center in the top five of the category. Then, this year he successfully moved away from the basket.

"While Les was such a key to our team with his play, he was also an outstanding leader on and off the court for us. Les set a great example for our players and other students in general. He proved what hard work and dedication could do, and I think we now see that ourselves with the success of our basketball program.

"It is amazing that Les Squair is the man he is today," continued Helm. "He has constantly been presented with tough obstacles throughout his life. His father died when Les was 13 years old forcing his mother to support his brothers and sister. Consequently, Les faced the many temptations and pressures of life on the Hill alone. However, he was always determined to do the right thing to succeed.

"Then this year when it seemed the fight was finally coming to an end, Les had to face yet another obstacle and challenge. His uncle, who had been like his 'second father,' died of leukemia just two weeks before first semester final examinations. Les, however, overcame the emotional loss and went on to complete his best semester at Juniata."

"I came to Juniata because I wanted an education and wanted to play basketball someplace where I would be a factor," said Squair. "I was happy to be a part of coach (Dan) Helm's program and the campus community. I always felt welcomed."

Les shook a lot of hands after he walked off the platform last Sunday. He got a lot of hugs too. While many will remember his powerful rebounds and pump-faking layups, those who really know Les Squair will remember his dedication to his family, Juniata College, and himself. Les Squair is selfish the way we all wish we could be. He wasn't going to let anything he really wanted get away no matter what the cost.

His advisor and friend Robert Reilly, Juniata professor of sociology and social work, summed up Les Squair and his Juniata experience very well.

"When most students would have given up and gone home, Les persisted," said Reilly. "Les overcame more barriers in his four years at Juniata than most of our students have seen in their entire lives. And for this I respect Les a great deal. He is truly a very special person."

FALL SPORTS' CAPTAINS NAMED

Steve Campbell of Mountville and Dan Crossey of Verona have been elected captains of the 1989 Juniata College football team, according to Juniata head coach Brad Small.

A 6'3", 215-pound senior linebacker from Hempfield High School, Campbell was fifth on the team with 42 tackles last season including 19 solos. He led Juniata with 12 tackles for losses, and was tied for the team-high with four quarterback sacks and two fumble recoveries. He is a three-year letterwinner for the Tribe.

Crossey is a 1986 graduate of Penn Hills High School and a three-year letterwinner for Juniata. A 5'8", 180-pound running back, he was third on the team in rushing last season with 223 yards and one touchdown. He ranks eighth in career rushing yards at Juniata with 1,428.

Kris Witchey of Baltimore, MD, formerly of Grand Junction, Colorado, has been named captain of the Juniata College women's volleyball team for the 1989 season, according to Juniata coach Larry Bock.

A 1986 graduate of Grand Junction High School and volleyball player for coach Max Kralchek, Witchey was an All-East and All-Middle Atlantic Conference setter for Juniata in 1988. Witchey is a three-year letterwinner.

Doug Kovacs of Lawrenceville, NJ (Lawrence High School), Tim Phelps of Flourtown (William Charter H.S.) and John Telenko of Elizabethtown have been named tri-captains of the 1989 Juniata College soccer team, according to Juniata assistant soccer coach Chris Noyes.

Kovacs is a midfielder for the Tribe while Phelps is a goalkeeper. Telenko, a back for the Indians, was third on the team last season in scoring with one goal and one assist.

Kathleen McGowan of Bellmawr, NJ (Triton Regional H.S.), has been named captain of the 1989 Juniata College field hockey team, according to Coach Kathi Quinn.

McGowan, who set a school-record last fall with 16 goals, is a three-year letterwinner at the forward position and is within range of Juniata's career scoring record.

FALL PREVIEWS

The Juniata College football team will have some gaps to fill in 1989 as 13 starters are gone from last year's 6-3-1 squad. Fourteen seniors leave the program after going 30-11-2 in four seasons.

Despite the holes on the depth chart first-year coach Brad Small, who succeeds Rob Ash, feels he has a talented group of underclassmen ready to step into the lineup.

The offense loses eight starters, including quarterback Cubby Davis, All-American SE Mike Cottle and the entire receiving corp. However, the Indians can count on a rushing attack led by junior preseason All-American Dennis DeRenzo, who became the first player in school history to rush for more than 1,000 yards in a season last fall. He'll work behind an offensive line that includes veterans John Sigler and Todd Ferrara.

The Tribe defense will miss five starters but has senior LB/DE Steve Campbell, a preseason All-American, returning along with veteran Jeff Haines to anchor the front line. Seniors Bryan Worner and Todd Rossman will quarterback the secondary.

Juniata returns 27 letterwinners (13 offense/14 defense) after losing 15 (9 off/6 def) from last year's squad.

CROSS COUNTRY

The Juniata College men's and women's cross country teams are looking up as they head into the 1989 season. Despite losing records last fall both have young but experienced rosters returning.

The men were 2-7 a year ago for coach Jim Payne and were 22nd out of 23 teams at the Middle Atlantic Conference meet. As many as a dozen letterwinners could battle for berths on the roster in '89.

The Juniata women were winless in seven decisions last year and finished 17th in the 18-team field at MACs.

Payne also coaches the women harriers.

Four letterwinners are expected to lead the way for the women's squad. The top runner should be team MVP Kim Wurth of Norwichtown, CT (Academy of The Holy Family). Wurth had an outstanding rookie campaign despite nagging injuries that eventually cut short her spring track season.

Seattle Seahawks Coach Chuck Knox wishes new Juniata Head Coach Dr. Bradley Small good luck for the upcoming season.

FIELD HOCKEY

The Juniata College women's field hockey team set a new school standard last fall with a 12-3-1 record. The Tribe finished tied for first place in the Middle Atlantic Conference Southwest section with a 4-1 record and was ranked 11th in the NCAA Division III — Pennsylvania rankings.

Obviously, coach Kathi Quinn's 1989 Juniata field hockey team has quite a tough act to follow. However, with 18 letterwinners returning it will be the most experienced team in Quinn's tenure at Juniata.

Senior captain Kathleen McGowan of Bellmawr, NJ (Triton High School), shattered the individual goals in a season record with 16 last fall and is one of two three-year letterwinners returning.

Senior goalie Gen Warner of Hummelstown (Lower Dauphin H.S.) allowed just five goals on 37 shots for an 86.5 save percentage in '88 and is back for her fourth season. Also at the goalie position, junior Deb Dougherty of Biglerville returns after 64 saves on 71 shots (90.1 save percentage) last fall.

Senior Kris Shepardson and juniors Jennifer Dipperry of Middleburg, Amy Blough of Elizabethtown, and Jill Schadler of Perkiomenville (Perkiomen Valley H.S.) are key upperclass returnees for Quinn.

VOLLEYBALL

Juniata College women's volleyball coach Larry Bock told his team and its followers to be patient in 1988 and let the season run its course. In the end, the course led to a 43-7 record and third place finish in the NCAA Division III National Tournament.

Veteran coach Bock, whose teams are 424-84 over 12 seasons, welcomes 11 letterwinners back in 1989 and expects them to utilize the experiences of last year to continue the strong tradition of Juniata College women's volleyball in the upcoming campaign. But again he says "be patient."

While All-American outside hitter Jackie Rebert has graduated, Bock can count on an outstanding senior group led by three All-East and All-MAC performers: outside hitter Melinda Selby of Elmora (Cambria Heights High School), middle blocker Rhonda Bygall of Brogue (Red Lion H.S.) and setter Kris Witchey of Baltimore (Grand Junction (CO) H.S.). Senior outside hitters Laurie Snow of Altoona and Angie Shue of York (Central York H.S.) are also top performers.

Johnstown natives and juniors Gina Leis (Bishop McCort H.S.) and Michelle Wissinger (Richland H.S.) were regulars as defensive specialists in the back row last season, while sophomore middle blocker Larissa Weimer of Altoona (Bishop Guilfoyle H.S.) returns as a starter after an impressive rookie campaign.

Juniata College's 1989 soccer team hopes to improve its offensive punch and in the process make gains in the win column. The Tribe was steady on defense but finished 2-11-3 last fall, due mainly to lack of success in the goal-scoring department (14 goals in 16 games).

Although leading scorer Steve Grater has graduated, there is light at the end of the offensive tunnel with the return of seniors Bob Kelley of Keene, NH and captain John Telenko of Elizabethtown, third and fourth respectively in scoring last season.

Senior Doug Kovacs of Lawrenceville, NJ (Lawrence H.S.), a midfielder, and classmate Tim Phelps of Flourtown (William Charter H.S.), a goal-keeper, also return to captain the squad.

This will be the first season for the Juniata soccer program under a head coach other than Klaus Jaeger, who resigned last November after 10 years at the helm. Assistant Chris Noyes will remain on the coaching staff.

Juniata was 0-4-2 in the Middle Atlantic Conference Northwest section last fall.

Sophomore pitcher Mike Reed was one of four Juniata baseball players named to the MAC All-Star Team this spring.

Success On College Hill This Spring

SPRING SPORTS REVIEW

The 1988-89 spring athletic season was highlighted by a record-setting women's tennis record and a 20-win baseball mark.

A quick review:

BASEBALL

The Juniata College baseball team reached the 20-win mark for the third time in nine years with a 20-10 finish in 1989. Coach Bill Berrier's squad won 11 in a row at one point this season and used a powerful offense and stingy pitching corps to win the Middle Atlantic Northwest section and Northern Division crowns.

Juniata owned a .319 team batting average while opponents hit at a .249 clip. The Tribe pitching staff accumulated a 3.98 earned run average to the opponents' 5.61. Juniata averaged 6.1 runs per contest while surrendering 4.6.

"I thought this team would be a good hitting team and they didn't disappoint me in that department," said Berrier. "I was also pleased with our pitching and defense. We had a solid season and just missed getting a bid to the NCAA Division III playoffs."

Seniors Amo Cianci of Woodlyn (Ridley H.S.) and Paul Hayduk of Gaithersburg, MD (Seneca Valley H.S.) were first-team All-MAC choices. Cianci, the designated hitter, led the team with nine doubles, a .387 batting average and .500 average with runners in scoring position. First baseman Hayduk (.368) topped the Tribe with 43 hits and 62 total bases.

Senior classmates 3B Jim Tomasetti of Altoona (.333) and 2B George Zanic of Pittsburgh (Swissvale H.S.) (.367) each had six doubles and led the team with 26 and 24 runs batted in respectively. Zanic was selected the team's most valuable player.

Senior David Reed of Stroudsburg (.211) hit one of Juniata's eight home runs this season and had a .357 on-base percentage. Senior Henry Marche of Alexandria (Juniata Valley H.S.) ended his pitching career at Juniata by earning one save.

(Northern Bedford H.S.), a second team All-MAC pick, had one of the best overall seasons for the Tribe. The shortstop/pitcher led the team with 13 stolen bases, was second on the team with a .373 batting average, and owned a 6-2 mark in nine starts on the mound. His earned run average was an outstanding 3.07 for a team-high 58 and two-thirds innings pitched.

The future is bright with the return of many experienced players like M. Reed and fellow sophomore Kevin Neff of Reading (Wyomissing H.S.). Neff, an All-MAC pitcher, was 5-3 with five saves this season while batting .292 and earning a team-high 21 base on balls. Junior pitcher/outfielder Scott Close of Somerset (.280) was 5-2 in eight starts with a 4.88 era.

Junior CF Vic Huber of Altoona was second on the team with a .359 average and third with a .513 slugging percentage while sophomore catcher John Bulger of Martinsburg (Central H.S.) (.262) walked 17 times. Sophomore Joe Calamita of Woodlyn (Ridley H.S.) was 2-0 in three starts and led the Tribe with a 1.47 era.

Chris Glover '89 returns a tough shot during a men's tennis match on College Hill.

SOFTBALL

Sophomores Jennifer Dippery of Middleburg and Kate Bradley of Philipsburg were the statistical leaders for the 1989 Juniata College women's softball team. Juniata finished 8-15 for fourth-year coach Dick Scialabba, whose roster included no seniors and just two juniors.

Dippery, a third baseman, led the team in batting average (.329), hits (24), total bases (26) and on-base percentage (.405). Bradley was again the top pitcher for the Tribe finishing with a 7-6 record in 14 starts, 11 complete games and an earned run average of 3.63. Bradley also had seven runs batted in and a team-high three stolen bases.

Freshman second baseman Carolyn Sheedy of Furlong (Central Bucks East H.S.) was right behind Dippery with a .313 batting average, 21 hits, 25 total bases and a .403 on-base percentage. Freshman pitcher Leslie Wass of Harrisburg (Central Dauphin H.S.) had the team's best earned run average (3.27) despite a 1-7 record and added two saves.

Freshman centerfielder Cathy Packer of Harrisburg (Central Dauphin H.S.) hit .268 and led the team in doubles (3) and walks (10). Freshman shortstop Amy Scialabba of Huntingdon led the squad with six sacrifices and batted a team-high .444 with runners in scoring position. Another freshman, catcher/designated hitter Gretta Gross of Manchester (Northeastern H.S.), tied for the team lead with seven RBI.

Junior Kirsten Grell of Johnstown (Bishop McCort H.S.) was the regular first baseman once again and had just three errors in 126 chances. Junior catcher Pam Lau of Kennett Square (Unionville H.S.) tied for the team lead with 10 runs scored.

Sophomore outfielder Dee Penepacker of Lewistown had two triples while sophomores Laura Johnson of Devon (Conestoga H.S.) and Jen Martinez of Blauvelt, NY (Rockland County Day) added depth for the Tribe.

"Being so young hurt our team at times this season," said Scialabba. "However, I think we learned a lot and improved in several areas as the season progressed. I'm especially pleased with our improvement as a team defensively. We cut down from 82 errors last year to 39 this season, and allowed only 21 unearned runs compared to 86 in 1988.

"We did everything we had to do to win some games this season except get the key hits when we needed them. We just never got the bats going."

Juniata hit only .214 as a team while opponents batted .268. The Tribe was shut out six times. However, in the nine games the bats got going enough for Juniata to score four or more runs the Indians were 8-1.

MEN'S TENNIS

The Juniata men's tennis team fell victim to a tough non-league schedule in 1989. Coach Brad Small's team finished with a 2-9 record, including three losses to Division II teams. The Tribe was 1-4 in the Middle Atlantic Conference Northwest.

In the MAC Championships, senior Rich Gottschall of Plattsburgh, NY (3-10) and junior Jon Seckinger of Allentown (Parkland H.S.) (8-5) each advanced to the second round of singles play. Chris Glover of Chatham, NJ and Mike Welker of Altoona combined as the doubles entry and were 5-4 this season.

Glover was 7-4 in singles play while Welker was 2-7. Exchange student Arendt Papenfuss (1-8), sophomores Scott Peck of Bedford (0-3) and Shawn O'Brien of Easton (2-9), and freshman Grant Hunter of Cherry Hill, NJ (East H.S.) (0-1) also played singles this spring.

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Coach Ray Pfrogner's team opened the season with six straight victories before dropping a 6-3 decision to powerful Scranton. Juniata then upended Dickinson and Messiah to complete a school-record 8-1 season. The team also picked up two exhibition victories over Penn State — Altoona.

Juniata finished second to Scranton in the Middle Atlantic Conference Northwest section standings and just missed the MAC team playoffs.

Juniata did, however, take a strong contingent to the Middle Atlantic Conference Individual Tournament at Haverford College. Freshman Michelle Frye of Altoona (8-2) and exchange student Juliette Dalattre (6-4) played singles while the doubles team of juniors Amy Buckbee of Warwick and Julia Thaler of Easton (Wilson H.S.) (5-3) entered the tourney for the second straight year.

Seniors Lynda Cass of Chaddsford (Unionville H.S.) (7-2), Lara Mann of Waynesboro, VA (Wilson Memorial H.S.) (5-3) and Alison Frutchev of Reading (Muhlenberg H.S.) (4-2) completed their careers with solid campaigns in singles play. Senior Georgia Stanaitis of Marion, CT (Southington H.S.) was 3-0 with Frutchev in doubles.

Juniors Buckbee and Thaler were 3-0 and 4-1 respectively in singles play. Junior Sue London of Clarks Summit (Abington Heights H.S.) was 2-2 in singles.

Juniata's Andy Larmore leads the pack on a debut run around the newly surfaced Jefford Oller track in Knox Stadium this spring.

MEN'S AND WOMEN'S TRACK

Juniata finished 4-5 in men's track and 5-7 in women's dual meets during the debut season on the new Knox Stadium track. The Juniata men scored one point at the Middle Atlantic Conference meet while the women picked up two. Both teams finished in 16th place at the MAC meet.

After a slow start in the MAC Tournament, the Tribe made the biggest move of the tourney by jumping six spots from Saturday to Sunday to finish 14th out of 21 teams. Juniata cut 24 shots off its first day score, also a tournament high.

Senior Tim Garvin of Jupiter, FL (Lower Moreland H.S. (PA)) led the team with an 80.2 stroke average. Seniors Mike Cottle of Everett (Bedford H.S.) (87.0), and Cubby Davis (88.3) and Tim Kirsch (96.0) of Hollidaysburg concluded their final seasons.

Alumni Tours

December 11-19, 1989

CHRISTMAS TIME in BAVARIA

hosted by Rex & Dorothy Hershberger '50

A reunion time for Alumni to the fairytale sites of Bavaria, with visits to the famous Christmas markets of Nuremberg, Rothenburg and Dinkelsbuehl. Excursions to the Winter Wonderland of the Tyrolean Alps, with a visit to the Passionplay village of Oberammergau, and last but not least, joyous times among friends.

March 2-19, 1990

KENYA and TANZANIA Photo Safari

A perfect time for this wildlife journey, when migration takes place and you have the opportunity to see thousands of Africa's animals during your game viewing drives.

Nairobi — Masai Mara — Nakura — Aberdare Park — Mt. Kenya — Amboseli — Ngorongoro — Olduvai — Serengeti — Gibb Farm — Manyara — Arusha — Nairobi.

As the environment threatens the habitat of these animals, now is the time to see cheetahs, elephants, rhinos, lions, buffalos, and giraffes at their best.

July 13-30, 1990

CHRISTIAN HERITAGE TOUR incl. Passionplay in Oberammergau

escorted by Dr. & Mrs. Donald F. Durnbaugh

Another journey to the roots of our Christian Heritage, as the Durnbaughs take you back to the origins of Brethren, Anabaptist and Reformed Heritage, plus through the spectacular scenery of the Alps. A truly inspiring tour.

June 8-25, 1990

"CHINA DYNASTY" CRUISE

A highlight of this year is this special sailing trip aboard PEARL CRUISE'S elegant "OCEAN PEARL." You experience the ancient glories and modern-day achievements of this historic empire with the benefit of having Dr. & Mrs. (Dorothy) Robert Neff, hosting this journey.

You will feel like a modern Marco Polo as you experience the wonders of the Ming Dynasty Treasures to Beijing's Forbidden City, the Great Wall, from a multi-course Chinese banquet to a visit to a Chinese family's home. You do all this and more from the elegance and comfort of your floating hotel/gourmet restaurant.

Space is strictly limited, special rates for Alumni and friends are being offered and therefore early reservations are highly recommended.
